MESSAGE VETOING

An Act extending time for the payment of the Enrolment Tax on certain acts heretofore passed.

EXECUTIVE CHAMBER,
Harrisburg, March 31, 1873.

To the Senate and House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania:

GENTLEMEN:—I herewith return, without my approval, House bill, No. 653, entitled "An Act extending the time for the payment of the enrolment tax on certain acts heretofore passed."

By the laws of this Commonwealth, upon any act of incorporation, or private act, or supplements thereto, conferring additional powers, there is imposed an enrolment tax. This tax varies in amount dependent upon the nature of the corporation and amount of capital. The maximum tax is one thousand dollars, the minimum twenty dollars.

By the enrolment laws of this Commonwealth this tax is required to be paid within one year after the act of incorporation or private act is approved by the Governor, and in default of such payment the act of incorporation or private act becomes absolutely "null and void," and no act becomes a law until it is paid.

By an act approved April 22, 1856, it was expressly provided that all private acts of Assembly upon which the enrolment tax had not been paid, "be and the same are hereby repealed," but it excepted those acts upon which it should be paid within one year thereafter. By this act all acts of incorporation and other private bills upon which the tax was not paid by April 22, 1857, became null and void. Whilst this tax is small considering the privileges conferred, yet, in the aggregate, from year to year, it amounts to a large sum, justly due to the Commonwealth, and should be paid into her treasury.

By the act of 1856, before referred to, all private acts prior thereto were repealed, if the enrolment tax was not paid by April, 1857. By referrin to the State Department, I find from the year 1857 to 1872, both years inclusive, there are sixteen hundred and twenty-two private acts passed, upon which the enrolment taxes due thereon have not been paid. Thirteen hundred and thirty of these private acts are for the incorporation of companies of various descriptions, and supplements thereto, upon all of which enrolment taxes are due to the Commonwealth. Accompanying and annexed to this message, I transmit a statement of said private acts, giving the title of each of same and year when passed, and call your attention thereto.

By a series of acts passed since 1857, and of a similar character to the bill herewith returned, the payment of the enrolment tax upon private acts has been extended from time to time, and the acts kept alive, and by an act approved April 3, 1872, the time for such payment was further extended to May 1, 1873, and by the bill herewith returned without my approval, the time of such payment is still further extended one year from its date of passage.

Upon what principle is this extension justifiable or excusable? Upon sixteen hundred and twenty-two private acts, thirteen hundred and thirty of which are of incorporations, there is due and owing the Commonwealth enrolment taxes, some of which have been due since 1857. Sixteen years. This tax bears no interest. Why should the payment of taxes due the Commonwealth, which do not even carry interest, be thus postponed from year to year, and all her other debtors or tax-payers be compelled to pay promptly, at least once if not twice a year, and on failure so to do, pay interest not less than six per cent., and in most cases twelve per cent.? What peculiar merit has this enrolment tax over other taxes, that its payment without even interest should be postponed from year to year indefinitely? I am unable to discern any but directly the opposite. During the very time that acts have been passed to postpone the payment of these enrolment taxes, without interest, acts have been passed to enforce the payment of the moneys, with interest, due the Commonwealth on lands. Why should the former be postponed and the latter enforced? Are not the tillers of the soil of this Commonwealth entitled to privileges equal to those who speculate in her private legislation?

The amount due the Commonwealth upon these sixteen hundred and twenty-two private and corporate acts, time would not permit me to ascertain, but the sum must be large. It will be observed that thirteen hundred and thirty of these acts are for the creation of corporations, or giving them additional privileges. The law permits the payment of the enrolment tax within one year, a time sufficient and within which any bona fide corporation could and does pay. It is those gotten up purely for speculation, not for public necessity or for public good, that profit by the character of legislation contained in the bill returned.

It is a notorious fact that for years past charters of incorporation have been obtained for the express purpose of sale—for the mere purpose of trade and traffic—and so used and to such an extent not very creditable to the Commonwealth. They pay no enrolment tax, under the system heretofore pursued of extending payment of same, until their owners find purchasers. The sooner this class of legislation is ended the better, and one effective way of doing it will be not to extend the time for the payment of enrolment taxes. Surely those who consume the time of the Legislature for private advantage or gain, and often to the prejudice of public business, should at least be required to pay within the time fixed the tax imposed thereon. There are now, as before stated, sixteen hundred and twenty-two of these private acts, of which thirteen hundred and thirty relate to corporations of various descriptions. By the law as it now stands, those of them upon which the enrolment tax is not paid on or before the first day of May next, (1873,) will then become null and void. It will end many, if not a great majority of these sixteen hundred and twenty-two acts; enable the Commonwealth to know what private acts she has granted are in force, and what are not, and prove a blessing to the Commonwealth generally. For which reasons I return the bill unapproved.
